PEOPLE POWER

OCCUPY WALL STREET VS. THE TEA PARTY

Occupy Wall Street and the Tea Party are so darn similar—except when they're not

At first glance, the Occupy Wall Street movement and the Tea Party movement appear polar opposites. One rails against what supporters see as the overarching power of wealthy banks. The other criticizes what supporters see as the federal government's overreach into businesses and people's lives.

But a closer look reveals that the two movements are in many ways as alike as they are different, despite assertions by some backers of each that comparisons are overly simplistic. Here's a brief breakdown. MCT

GETTY IMAGES FILE

STARTING LINE

The origins of both movements are rooted in anger with the nation's financial industry, triggered in large part by the federal bailout of Wall Street institutions in 2008, according to several experts who study political and social movements.

TRIBUNE FILE

APPLES AND ORANGES?

If anger and frustration are the ties that bind Occupy Wall Street and the Tea Party, the links begin to fray quickly after that. Some Tea Party leaders view the Wall Street protests with disdain and say any comparison between the two is apples and oranges. Occupy supporters have criticized the Tea Party.

REUTERS

GRASSROOTS DEBATE

Each movement accuses the other of not being a genuine grassroots effort. Occupy Wall Street participants say the Tea Party is bankrolled by wealthy conservative groups. Tea Party supporters suggest the Occupy protests are financed by labor unions or Democratic patrons.

GETTY IMAGES FILE

GAME PLANS

The Tea Party and Occupy demonstrators address issues differently. Tea Party supporters delved into electoral politics last year, vetting and fielding candidates. Some Occupy supporters have created lists of demands, but it's unclear whether the movement will seek solutions primarily through politics.

Protest returns to Grant Park; 130 arrested

Chicago Tribune

Chicago police arrested about 130 Occupy Chicago protesters starting about 1 a.m. Sunday after the group returned to Grant Park for a second Saturday night and tried to maintain a camp in the park after its official closing time.

Police estimated that the crowd that showed up for a rally earlier in the evening peaked at around 3,000 people by the time protesters arrived in Congress Plaza at Michigan Avenue and Congress Parkway.

Police confirmed Sunday that some of the protesters arrested also were taken in to custody in the first round of Occupy Chicago arrests last weekend. Those individuals are being held for violating the conditions of their bail bond, Chicago Police News Affairs Officer Daniel O'Brien said. The protesters arrested for a second time are expected to remain in jail until they go before a judge, police said.

During the rally in Congress Plaza that preceded the arrests, protesters made speeches talking up the cause and declared their event peaceful. Police filmed parts of the protest.

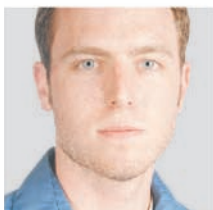

On Sunday afternoon, a small contingent of Occupy Chicago organizers rallied outside of the Central District police station, cheering as protesters trickled out of jail.

"This is an attack on the core of what it means to be an American citizen," said Patrick Robinson, who sat on the sidewalk with his laptop. "We condemn [Mayor Emanuel's] gross violation of the human rights of those arrested."

Police say 175 people were arrested Oct. 16, when some involved in Occupy Chicago first refused to leave the plaza after warnings from police.

Sunday's arrests repeated much of the same pattern, with some arrested while other protesters stood on a nearby sidewalk, chanting as people were led to police vehicles.

This crisis calls for a super-agent

Stephen Markley
» redevye@tribune.com

It now appears we're living out an episode of "24."

When the real-time Kiefer Sutherland drama ended a few years back, I became despondent. Where was I going to get my fix of political intrigue, espionage and ingenious high-end torture techniques? Especially since the Bush administration was over?

Then along comes this Rube Goldberg plot by Iranian security forces to assassinate the Saudi ambassador using a Mexican drug gang, Los Zetas. Hell, "Los Zetas" even sounds like the kind of un-PC moniker a coked-out Caucasian TV screenwriter would come up with as the season's secondary villain.

This is why the CIA should hire me as a consultant in unraveling this dastardly conspiracy. I watched every single season of "24," including the ones that sucked. Like Season 6, when Jack Bauer's brother and father turn out to be evil industrialists. And for some reason Ricky Shroeder shows up as an atheist counter-terrorism agent.

That was embarrassing.

This is why my encyclopedia-like knowledge of "24" makes me the perfect instrument to deal with this Iranian assassination plot. I'm like the Jack Bauer of knowing the mechanics of "24" story arcs—only instead of training as a government super-agent, killer and all-around badass, I watch TV pretty good. And even though I long ago retired as a "24" fan, it looks like I'll have to come back. One. Last. Time.

Now that we're living in an episode of "24," here's what we can infer about Iran's shadowy and elite Quds Force and Saudi Ambassador Adel al-Jubeir:

» A scheming corporation is undoubtedly behind this plot. It's always some kind of weapons manufacturer, private security firm or petroleum company responsible for the operation to assassinate or detonate. My money's on Halliburton or Koch Industries!

» Ambassador al-Jubeir is actually in cahoots with the bad guys. I don't know the ambassador—and I'm sure he's a swell dude—but the fact remains there has to be a twist, so mark my words: al-Jubeir was part of the plan all along. This also means his wife/closest aide/friend will no doubt soon strangle him with garroting wire.

» A black president will face an impossible choice.

» While untangling the web of deceit and conspiracy, a government super-agent also will have some kind of family emergency. This could involve a bobcat or cougar but doesn't have to.

» The Mexican drug gang eventually will become entirely dispensable. Expect them to fall victim to their own weaponized virus and/or for a character to toss a match into a pool of gasoline and say something along the lines of, "Tell Salazar I said hello."

The only thing that doesn't gel with my theory is that all of this wasn't cleared up in the first 24 hours, which may mean that our hero government super-agent still is being tortured in a Chinese prison or has not yet decided to come out of retirement. One. Last. Time.

FIVE-DAY TRENDCAST

Nobody can predict the news, but we've got a pretty good idea what we'll be talking about this week.

MONDAY

Will Albert Pujols of the Cardinals have another historic game against the Rangers? Or will Texas rise up against The Machine? Only Monday night's World Series Game 5 will tell.

TUESDAY

Michelle Obama comes home for a visit, bringing those stellar biceps with her. Chicago definitely wants two tickets to the gun show.

THURSDAY

Beavis and Butt-head make their way back onto MTV after a long hiatus. Chances are they'll again be mumbling "hey baby" to unsuspecting womenfolk and giggling like maniacs at the slightest sexual innuendo.

FRIDAY

GTL, FML and DTF: All the acronyms will be in full effect when the "Jersey Shore" scholarly conference (yes, you read that right) descends on the University of Chicago on Friday.

THIS WEEK

Conrad Murray's involuntary manslaughter case could go to the jury to deliberate this week. Murray is charged in connection with the drug-related death of Michael Jackson.

“This is why the CIA should hire me as a consultant in unraveling this dastardly conspiracy.”

Extreme makeover: CTA

First order of rail cars about to make its debut

Chicago Tribune

Here come the cars.

Full production is finally under way on a $1.1 billion order of 706 new CTA rail cars, and the first 26 cars have been delivered to the transit agency, officials tell the Tribune.

The new rail cars will enter service soon, officials said.

"We are making final adjustments [to the 26 new cars] before putting them into revenue service in the very near future," CTA spokeswoman Molly Sullivan said.

The CTA expects to have 40 more cars delivered from Canada-based Bombardier by the end of the year and another 192 cars delivered in 2012, officials said. The schedule for the remaining cars in 2013 and possibly 2014 still is being worked out, officials said.

The new 5000 Series rail cars will replace trains that are up to 42 years old, far beyond the normal life of the equipment. The old cars have been increasingly prone to breakdowns and safety failures. The CTA expects to save $8 million to $10 million a year on maintenance when the old fleet is retired.

CTA President Forrest Claypool gave the go-ahead in July for Bombardier to begin production, CTA and Bombardier officials said, although Claypool told reporters as recently as Oct. 13 that final approval had not been authorized because minor issues with the new trains were still being worked out.

Ten prototype cars that the CTA tested with and without passengers over the past two years have been returned to Bombardier for retrofitting with changes ordered as a result of the tests, Sullivan said.

CTA and Bombardier officials declined to describe or characterize an assortment of problems that arose and needed to be resolved before production could begin.

The CTA cited proprietary information in refusing to comply with a Freedom of Information Act request filed by the Tribune.

Clinton warns Iran: U.S. still supports Iraq

1 U.S. Secretary of State Hillary Clinton warned Iran on Sunday not to view the withdrawal of U.S. combat troops from Iraq as an opportunity to try to build its influence in the country. "No one, most particularly Iran, should miscalculate about our continuing commitment to and with the Iraqis going forward," she told CNN's "State of the Union" when asked whether Iran's relationship with Iraq is a concern.

Therapy for Giffords

2 U.S. Rep. Gabrielle Giffords arrived in North Carolina on Sunday to undergo "intensive" rehabilitation as she continues her recovery from being shot in the head in a mass shooting in January, her office said. The two-week trip to Asheville has been in the works for several months, according to her office.

Fatal shark attack

3 A shark killed a 32-year-old Texas man diving off a popular Australian tourist island Saturday, the third fatal shark attack off the country's west coast in two months, police said. A police spokesman said the body surfaced with "obviously traumatic fatal injuries."

Thai floods continue

4 Thailand, reeling from its worst flooding in decades, received more bad news Saturday as the death toll from three months of downpours rose to 356 and the prime minister warned that the inundation could last six more weeks.

1,000 feared dead in Turkey

5 VAN, Turkey As many as 1,000 people were feared killed Sunday when a powerful earthquake hit southeast Turkey, flattening buildings and leaving survivors crying for help from under the rubble.

As night fell, survivors and emergency workers battled to pull people out of the debris in the city of Van and town of Ercis, where a student dormitory collapsed.

Residents in Van joined in a frantic search, using hands and shovels and working under floodlights and flashlights, hearing people buried alive calling from under mounds of concrete in darkness and bitter cold.

An official at the Van provincial crisis center told Reuters more than 100 people had been confirmed killed so far and hundreds more were missing under destroyed buildings.

More accounts of dead bodies and destruction were emerging from smaller settlements across the remote area near the Iranian border, most of them left without electricity or phone access.

"The death toll is rising. Rescue teams are taking out dead bodies all the time," Reuters photographer Osman Orsal said in Ercis, a town of 100,000 some 60 miles north of Van.

In Van, an ancient city on a lake ringed by mountains and with a population of 1 million, cranes were used to shift the rubble of a crumpled apartment building where bystanders estimated about 70 people were trapped.

"We heard cries and groaning from underneath the debris, we are waiting for the rescue teams to arrive," Halil Celik told Reuters as he stood beside the ruins of a building that had collapsed before his eyes.

Matt Forte and Lance Briggs have made it clear they want their contracts upgraded, but do their performances back up their demands? Here's how they did vs. Tampa Bay.

Briggs

If you tally six tackles and an interception every game, someone's going to pay up.

$$$$

Forte

With 108 rushing yards and a TD by halftime, he could have taken the second half off and still be arguing for top dollar.

"Pinball Wizard," The Who

The Bears' top offensive weapon dashed, darted and slashed through the Buccaneers defense, racking up 183 combined yards rushing and receiving to go with a touchdown. Definitely don't mind putting this on repeat.

BLOODY GOOD

HEAR THAT? IT'S THE BEARS WHISTLING A HAPPY TUNE IN LONDON

RedEye

Maybe the NFL is on to something with London games. From the looks of it on TV, the crowd at Wembley Stadium was buying what the Bears-Tampa Bay matchup was selling. The result in particular was music to the ears of Bears fans. In fact, if Sunday's game had a soundtrack supplied by hitmakers from the U.K., here's what it would look like.

BEARS	4	3	3

Raheem Morris

"Bloody Sunday," U2

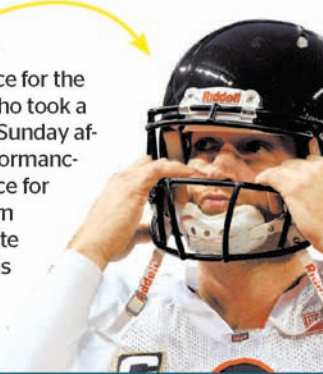

There's no better song to describe what the Buccaneers' head coach must have been thinking Sunday. Tampa Bay had four starters leave the game with injuries, including Earnest Graham, who was filling in for sidelined running back LeGarrette Blount.

Jay Cutler

"Don't Panic," Coldplay

This is just good advice for the Bears quarterback, who took a slight step backward Sunday after a pair of solid performances. It's also good advice for Bears fans, as the team picked up a win despite Cutler not being on his game. GETTY IMAGES

The Buccaneers quarterback looked dangerous when he had time to throw, but the Bears made him pay when he didn't. Freeman was picked off four times Sunday, the final time coming with less than two minutes left and the Bucs attempting to tie or take the lead.

It's too bad the Bears left Monday, as the defensive lineman probably would have had the champagne flowing all week in London. Peppers, injured knee and all, twice stopped Tampa Bay running backs for no gain and constantly pressured Bucs QB Josh Freeman.

Roy Williams

"I'm So Bored with the U.S.A.," The Clash

It took an overseas trip for the wide receiver to look effective again, hauling in four passes for 59 yards. Williams did have an inexcusable drop, but he showed good hands on his 25-yard TD catch—his first score of the season—in the second quarter.

Devin Hester

"My Iron Lung," Radiohead

The ace returner's status was iffy all week with a chest injury. But Hester caught four passes—including one to secure a key first down in the fourth quarter—for 46 yards and returned six kicks. Still looks pretty good to us.

With all the pomp and circumstance before the Bears-Tampa Bay game Sunday in London, the crowd at Wembley Stadium seemed primed for a big play. So what did Buccaneers kicker Michael Koenen do? He booted the opening kickoff out of bounds, and the fans pelted him with boos.

It would appear Devin Hester's reputation precedes him, as the Brits were denied a dazzling return from the jump. Either that, or the soccer mad country detests any poor displays that involve kicking. Come to think of it, it's probably the latter. Sorry, Devin.

OH, YES!

Just when Kyle Orton thought he might sniff the field in Denver again, Tim Tebow (above) does this. The QB rescued the Broncos from a 15-0 fourth-quarter deficit against Miami with two TD passes in the final 2:44. That forced overtime, and Denver won 18-15. Hope the bench is comfortable, Kyle. REUTERS/PHOTO

OH, NO!

Fantasy owners who drafted Chris Johnson early have to be kicking themselves. Tennessee's superstar turned in another lackluster game Sunday against Houston, totaling just 45 yards of offense. Is it too late to make a trade?

UH-OH

Just when Detroit thought it might have a ray of hope, the Lions might be in trouble again. Quarterback Matthew Stafford (left), who's thrown 15 touchdown passes this season, limped off the field in Sunday's loss to Atlanta. Of course, that might help the Bears in their chase for a wild-card spot ...

1 Who on the Bears would excel at cricket?	Whoever man can nurdle a mullygrubber without slog-gin' it too badly, aye.	Why, Lord Craig Steltz, of the Steltz-upon-Avon-upon-Darbyshiresmith-adoo.	I heard Jerry Angelo was swinging a cricket bat during the second half. Scary!	Seems Jay Cutler's already an expert at the slog.	First, can we please find a full team of Bears who excel in football?

Say it this way, Theo

RedEye

The newspaper industry thanks you, Theo Epstein.

As reported by csnne.com, Epstein took out a full-page ad in Sunday's Boston Globe, thanking the Red Sox and their fans. Epstein will be introduced as the Cubs' new president of baseball operations Tuesday.

Now, it's only fair that Epstein say hello to Chicago the same way, right? We know what he should write if he wants to buy a full-page ad in, oh, let's say RedEye.

DEAR CUBS NATION,

It feels weird calling you that, honestly. Maybe we should think even bigger. OK, I've decided: From now on you will be known as Cubs Kingdom. Has a nice ring to it, right?

Please, no red carpets for my arrival. I'm just a regular guy who goes to Starbucks just like you. Besides, we don't want anything reminding us of the success the Cardinals have enjoyed lately. Believe me, I want to rub Tony La Russa's nose in our impending glory as much as you do. Did you see how he openly mocked sabermetrics? Disgusting.

Speaking of rings, I promise not to show off the ones I won in Boston. In fact, if this doesn't work out, I vow to let you blow them up like you did the Bartman ball. Er, I mean, Steve who?

Thanks for all the trust you put in me. By the way, I've got a great recipe for goat stew.

HBO'S HEAVY HITTER

Tom Hanks (left) is making a serious case for television MVP. According to thr.com, the network is developing a half-hour comedy titled “Players,” which will follow the lives of college athletes.

Hanks will serve as an executive producer; he also co-produced the Emmy-winning miniseries “Band of Brothers,” “John Adams” and “The Pacific” for HBO. And if “Players” needs a theme song, we suspect Chet Haze—Hanks' rapper son and Northwestern student—might get the call.

Singer Bareilles steps out from behind the piano for "Sing-Off"

By Renee Mailhiot

REDEYE

Sara Bareilles says becoming a judge on NBC's "The Sing-Off" was a no-brainer. The three-time Grammy nominee this season took Nicole Scherzinger's seat at the judges' table for the a cappella singing competition when Scherzinger left to judge Fox's "The X Factor." Bareilles, who probably is best known for her 2007 hit, "Love Song," called in to talk about the show, what's on her iPod and her approach to judging "The Sing-Off," which airs at 7 p.m. Mondays on NBC.

What drew you to become a part of "The Sing-Off"?

I have a background in a cappella music. I went on it last year for the finale and performed, and I fell in love with the process and energy of the contestants and groups. I really loved the show for showcasing this particular genre of music and how difficult it is. The judges were amazing, and it was kind of a no-brainer to me. I wasn't too worried about whether or not to do it, I was worried about critiquing, worried about whether or not that would be comfortable.

How would you describe your judging style on the show?

I'm coming from a place where I feel I'm in the ranks with them. I really empathize and identify with these groups, where they come from and why they're singing together. For me, I think I try to be kind. But I want to be fair. I want to be honest. I'm not an [bleep]. I'm not going to tell them to give up music, I think that kind of criticism is a waste of energy and doesn't make sense to me. I try to be constructive and highlight what they do well, and tell them what they need to work on.

What do you think of the other singing shows out there?

"American Idol" is the one I've seen the most of in years past. I'm sheepishly admitting: I'm gone so much that it's hard for me to actually watch anything in regularity. I've caught snippets. I haven't seen any of "The X Factor" yet, but I'm curious. "The Voice" I've watched with my friend Adam [Levine] as one of the judges. I thought that was an entertaining show. Music competition shows obviously strike a nerve with the American population right now—actually, it's really more worldwide. Everybody loves that stuff.

If you could make a dream a cappella group of anyone you could want in it, who would you pick?

I think we should make an a cappella group of the judges plus Nick Lachey. It'd be four people that would figure out how to do it well. Me, Shawn [Stockman], Ben [Folds] and Nick. Although I'd find one girl maybe. It'd be fun; we talked about doing something or performing together in some capacity.

Def Jam retrospective a must-have

By Ernest Wilkins

REDEYE

Def Jam isn't just a label. It's a piece of American culture, like the Model T. Or the Crunchwrap Supreme.

(By the way, I'm a former employee of Island Def Jam. Full disclosure and all that.) Co-founders Russell Simmons and Rick Rubin were true architects of hip-hop culture: They created music they wanted to hear and let everything else fall by the wayside. Yes, everyone knows they founded the label in Rubin's NYU dorm room, but with the release of the new book "Def Jam Recordings: The First 25 Years Of The Last Great Record Label," readers get an inside look at how it began and what happened along the ride through first-hand accounts from Simmons, Rubin and the artists themselves.

The coffee-table book features never-before-seen images and classic press shots of Def Jam artists, from forgotten names like Oran "Juice" Jones to current heavyweights such as Jay-Z, Kanye West and Rihanna. The amazing curation of images by graphic designer (and long-tenured Def Jam employee)

Cey Adams is a gem. As the man who created album covers for the label—"Fear of a Black Planet"? That's him—he argues a large piece of hip-hop culture isn't just for the ears.

"Hip-hop is a visual art form," Adams said Friday at a book discussion at the Chicago Urban Art Society. "I wish that was still in the forefront of the minds of people making it. Imagery is so important to how it all comes together."

Def Jam Recordings:
The First 25 Years Of The Last
Great Record Label

Rizzoli
$35, available now

Co-author Bill Adler, the original publicity director for the label, is vocal about its place in history. That "Last Great Record Label" tag in the title? His words. "I call Def Jam the last great record label not because I'm being cocky or facetious, but speaking matter-of-factly" he said Friday. "I don't know if it can happen again."

That's scary as hell, but given the lack of originality in the music industry today, he might be right.

People who are used to hearing hip-hop on the radio and in their daily lives don't understand there was a time that this music and culture were virtually unknown by the masses. This book is a must-buy for fans of hip-hop, music history, art, American culture and entrepreneurship. Get it in your life.

CD REVIEW

Jay-Z should give Chris Martin a hug

Dear Mr. Carter (can I call you Sean? Jigga Man?),

I respectfully request that you have a chat with your BFF Chris Martin. Or just give him a hug and a little reassurance that we're all gonna be OK.

Judging from the tracks on "Mylo Xyloto," your friend believes that what the world needs now is love—and lots of it. Paper-heart-cutout, glitter-encrusted, wouldn't-it-be-nice-if-we-could-hold-hands-on-a-cloud love.

And maybe we do. Maybe we all should "be a cartoon heart" and "we'll run wild, we'll be glowing in the dark," as he urges on "Charlie Brown."

But do you feel like being a cartoon heart, Jay? Because I don't. And lines like, "Life goes on, it gets so heavy/the wheel breaks the butterfly/every tear a waterfall"(from "Paradise") just kinda make me want to turn on "Hard Knock Life."

I know you weren't consulted on these lyrics, Hov, but you've got to shake a little edge into your boy. The man ends this album with a track that includes the line, "My arms to wings/oh those clumsy things/send me up to that wonderful world/and then I'm up with the birds." I mean, c'mon.

Coldplay
Mylo Xyloto
(Capitol Records)

The record's not a complete failure. "Hurts Like Heaven" is nearly danceable (!), but even that high point is lyrically a letdown — a lot of surface-level emotion and not a lot of innovation. We've got to work on this.

Best wishes/fist pound/etc.,
Emily

St. Louis Cemetery No. 1, New Orleans

Cemetery No. 1 perhaps is the most famous of New Orleans' cemeteries. Visitors have witnessed phantom figures, Civil War ghosts and yellow fever victims restlessly stalking through the maze of crypts, Senate said. But perhaps the most well-known spirit is that of Marie Laveau, the city's own voodoo queen. She is often seen walking the grounds. "She haunts her tomb," Senate said. "If you go there, take along a piece of chalk, make 3 X's on her tomb, and if you ask a prayer or request, she will help you get it. Always bring your chalk."

Resurrection Catholic Cemetery, Justice, Illinois

Chicagoland's most famous spirit really is just looking for some company, and a way home. The locals call her "Resurrection Mary," Senate said. She is seen not only within the cemetery but just outside of the gates. If you're driving through the area, she just may try to hitch a ride. Over the years, thousands of people have reported a young woman who flags down passing cars for a ride home. When they ask for an address, she supplies that of the cemetery. Often, "Mary" vanishes in the car or steps out at the cemetery and fades into darkness, Senate said. During the '30s, a Polish woman between the ages of 17 and 22 was on her way back from a dance at the O'Henry Ballroom when she was killed in a car accident. She was buried in Resurrection Cemetery, and locals believe that this is "Mary." She is always seen wearing a vintage ball gown and seems incredibly lifelike—until she vanishes.

5 CEMETERIES STEEPED IN HISTORY, HAUNTS

CNN

Walking through a hushed cemetery at night with only a flashlight to guide your way can be a frightening experience for amateur ghost hunters this Halloween.

But the spirits you may encounter in a cemetery aren't always there to scare, says Richard Senate, a historian and ghost hunter of 33 years. Rather, they are full of grief in their final resting place.

"Oddly enough, a lot of cemeteries aren't that haunted," Senate said. "People haunt where they loved. The idea of haunting a cemetery outside of someone who is grieving—that's what we're picking up, the grief of a person, rather than their spirit linked to a site."

Senate shared what he regards as some of the most haunted cemeteries in America—and one of them is right here in Chicagoland area.

GRAVEYARDS & GHOSTS

Boothill Cemetery, Tombstone, Ariz.

Once a rollicking silver rush town, Tombstone is now the true embodiment of a ghost town. The scenes of incredible violence that took place in its lawless streets still resonate, especially the infamous gunfight at the O.K. Corral among the Clantons, the Earps and Doc Holliday. Three of the Clanton gang were killed in the fight, which only lasted about 30 seconds. They now rest in Boothill Cemetery, alongside gamblers, smugglers and outlaws, Senate said. "Tombstone is a true place for ghost hunters to go," he said. "It is chock full of haunted sites, and the cemetery is but one."

Gettysburg Cemetery, Gettysburg, Penn.

The site of one of the deadliest battles in American history naturally still is haunted by the vestiges of war, with shadowy phantom figures in both Union and Confederate uniforms reportedly pacing the battlefield and cemetery. Senate notes that one of the most persistent ghosts is really just there to be social. In the cemetery, a man often is seen wearing a black hat with a star, symbolic of one of the Texas regiments fighting with the Confederates at Gettysburg. He often tries to converse with tourists and on several occasions has posed with families for photos or takes a photo of family if they request it, Senate said. During photo development or even on the camera's screen, the man disappears.

IF YOU GO

Should you decide to stop by any of these cemeteries and go on your own ghost hunt, Senate has a few words of advice. Remember to be respectful of those who have passed on, and don't disturb any grave to try to incite a ghost. "You should be like a ghost: No one should know you've been there," Senate said.

OR NOT HOT RIGHT NOW

When it comes to new bars and restaurants, everyone's got an opinion. While some readers are hot for these spots, the experience left others, well, cold.

Cantina Laredo

508 N. State St. 312-955-0014

This Texas-based Mexican restaurant and lounge has set up camp in River North with a massive two-story space.

Hot: "The food was 8.5 out of 10 but the decor and the ambience are 10 out of 10! There's a lounge upstairs for drinks and small appetizers. Table-side guac was as fresh and good as it comes."

—newfoodie

Cold: "Decor was attractive ... but, the food was un-newsworthy. An average experience at this price point doesn't cut it ... I'd rather hit Uncle Julio's for fajitas and a margarita!"

—lynn9318, Old Town

25 Degrees

736 N. Clark St.
312-943-9700

Gourmet burgers, craft cocktails and spiked milkshakes are the name of the game at this River North burger bar.

Hot: "Our burgers were cooked perfectly. In fact, this [is] the kind of burger I crave and then am met with disappointment more often than not because many restaurants/burger joints just overcook it."

—Ang, Gold Coast

LENNY GILMORE/REDEYE PHOTOS

Cold: "Very unimpressed with the place. No fries with a burger at a sit-down place when you pay $12? Come on. [I] would rather go to Kuma's and pay the same and deal with the crowd."

—AJLindquist, Uptown

The Pump Room

1301 N. State Pkwy.
312-601-2970

The new reboot of the legendary Pump Room brings simple, seasonal fare with a menu created by Jean-Georges Vongerichten, most recently of lauded ABC Kitchen in New York.

Hot: "Worth waiting for. The restaurant, as well as the hotel lobby area and bars, is stunning. I think that, when full, it will be very noisy; along the windows may be a bit quieter. The menu/food/service all well above average. Upbeat, exciting new destination."

—jake, Streeterville

Cold: "Not what we hoped for. After two dinners at the new Pump Room, I can honestly say that this is missed potential. The dinners were just OK, nothing memorable. ABC Kitchen in NYC is one of our favorites, and the Pump Room does not even begin to compare. (Sorry, Jean-Georges)."

5 signs you're in a good restaurant

CNN

Sean Elder, editor in chief of the digital food magazine Real Eats, identifies the clues that your restaurant meal is in capable hands.

1. If you're late for your reservation, they should still look thrilled to see you.

"Each customer should leave feeling like they are like their own personalized 'Truman Show' and it has all been done for them. And they should arrive feeling that way too."

2. Tell me what you like in a white/red and I'll pair it with what you're having.

"When you ask the waiter for a wine recommendation, it's OK if they don't know—but they should quickly go to the sommelier or bartender for some expertise. It's about being taken care of."

3. The bread is crusty and delicious, it's warm when it's brought to the table and the butter is not rock hard.

"If it arrives quickly, and deliciously, it's almost like a first kiss, or at least a good handshake."

4. Don't drown me with water.

"The only thing worse than an empty glass when you're feeling parched is the busboy with the eyes of an assassin, waiting for you to take a single sip before he leaps in and fills your glass again."

5. They'll cook your meat/fish/fowl the way you want it.

"Nothing worse than being lectured by some earnest waiter—or worse yet, chef—about how they can't, in good conscience, serve you a bloody burger. Unless there's a law against it ... give me my meat the way I want it."

You could have slept exactly 8 more minutes ...

If caffeine owns you, it's time to reassert yourself

Chicago Tribune

For most people, a morning cup of java isn't harmful. But if you rely on coffee to get you out of bed, to stave off midmorning headaches and to avoid the 3 p.m. crash, you may be hooked on one of the most popular drugs in the world.

Nearly 90 percent of American adults drink coffee on a regular basis. More than 50 percent of adults, meanwhile, consume just over three cups of coffee a day.

But caffeine is a tricky stimulant to shake. Though tolerance levels vary, drinking just 100 milligrams per day—the amount of a small cup of brewed coffee—and then giving it up can lead to withdrawal symptoms ranging from headaches and depression to flu-like nausea and muscle pain, according to the National Institutes of Health.

Coffee—like sugary breakfast foods—can create a cycle of extreme energy swings. The National Institutes of Health also reports that caffeine raises blood pressure and increases feelings of stress, anxiety and road rage. It can leave you feeling wired 12 to 16 hours after the last cup, wreaking havoc on sleep. And it can exacerbate health conditions such as diabetes by making blood sugar rise faster than usual.

To start weaning yourself off the joe, figure out how much caffeine you're ingesting during the day, including soft drinks and energy drinks; if you can't track it, it's too much. Also try the following tips:

Wake up and drink 8 ounces of water

This strategy seems to slow coffee consumption and also works if you have a morning diet or regular soda habit, said Brian Wansink, founder and director of the Cornell University Food and Brand Lab and an expert on psychology and food consumption.

Choose your approach

Some people can go cold turkey; others need to gradually reduce. "There's no evidence that either approach is superior," said James Lane, a caffeine researcher and professor in the department of psychiatry and behavioral sciences at Duke University Medical Center.

Taper

To minimize withdrawal symptoms, gradually reduce the amount of caffeine by drinking half regular and half decaffeinated and gradually increasing the amount of decaf, said Ling Wong, a Santa Monica, Calif.-based nutrition and wellness coach. "You can also try tea."

Try Sanka

Barry Maher of Corona, Calif., said he managed to quit drinking several quarts of coffee a day by substituting "the worst-tasting coffee substitute that ever existed, Sanka."

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
With the sun in your sign, your sexual confidence is returning. You'll feel better about your current situation. If you're single, you'll feel calm about finding the right person at the right time. If you're in a relationship, you'll know that you can improve things with your honey.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
You might not feel like your sexual relationship is fair. That married guy promised you he'd leave his wife. Saturn says everybody is lying.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
A sensitive moon is turning you into Emo Boy. You're freaking out about all the mean people in the world and feeling incredibly sorry for yourself. Get over it. Believe it or not, the universe doesn't revolve around you and your petty problems.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
You could be asked to take on a more assertive or public role at work. The moon is increasing your stage presence and your personal charisma. Along the way, you could meet some flirtatious new colleagues who appreciate your charms.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
A bountiful sun is bringing you positive energy. When you ask that gorgeous guy out, expect to hear, "Yes," instead of "Eww!" For once, your bed might be warm instead of cold and breezy. Things are looking up.

Aries March 21-April 19
With the moon opposite your sign, you're growing paranoid about your sweetheart. Why is your guy avoiding giving you his home phone number? You have reason to be suspicious.

Taurus April 20-May 20
You're losing enthusiasm for a romantic relationship. Jupiter is reminding you that you don't have to be dating a bald guy or an overweight chick. The world is your oyster, and there are probably better options out there for you. Probably.

Gemini May 21-June 21
You're in a kinky mood, and you'll want to share inventive ideas with your partner. Mars has you picking out props, choosing sexy lingerie or coming up with some interesting role-playing concepts. Just remember: Princess Leia/Han Solo has been done to death.

Cancer June 22-July 22
Pluto is reminding you that no matter how hard you flush, an old relationship might resurface when you least want it. A former flame could be suffering from the delusion that you still love him or her. Keep flushing.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You're bursting out of your seams as Mars reminds you that you haven't had proper sex in ages. You'll call up a former lover and schedule an intimate rendezvous. Or you'll make a move on that sexy friend who has been giving you signals.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
An emotional sun has you obsessing about every relationship that didn't work out. Really, do you have to keep doing this every time your love life hits a road block? Dredging up your sexual past is as pointless as voting for a Tea Party candidate.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
People keep giving you advice about how to handle your love life. Neptune says don't let your mother tell you how to handle your boyfriend.

LISA RANDALL

The Chicago Public Library welcomes Lisa Randall, renowned Professor of Physics at Harvard University and one of today's most extraordinary, influential and highly cited theoretical physicists, as she discusses and signs her new book, Knocking on Heaven's Door: How Physics and Scientific Thinking Illuminate the Universe and the Modern World. The free program takes place on Tuesday, November 1 at 6:00 p.m., in the Cindy Pritzker Auditorium (Lower Level) at the Harold Washington Library Center, 400 S. State St. In Knocking on Heaven's Door Randall examines how the latest developments in physics have the potential to radically revise our understanding of the world. The book is an exhilarating and accessible overview of these developments and an impassioned argument for the significance of science. For more information, visit the Library's website at chicagopubliclibrary.org, or call 312-747-4050.

Cubs' Wells dresses down to do good

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Luis Gomez

» lgomez@tribune.com
» @aboutluisgomez

When Cubs pitcher Ryan Dempster hosts his annual Casino Night fundraiser, the team comes decked out in white tuxedos with black bowties.

But when fellow Cub Randy Wells hosts his benefit concert with Texas Red Dirt singer Stoney LaRue at Joe's Bar on the Near North Side, those same teammates would be considered dressed up if they're wearing a collar.

"I don't want to make it stuffy," said Wells, sporting a backward ball cap and a Waco Fire Rescue T-shirt, during his military-focused Boot Bash at Joe's Bar on Friday. "That's not me. I keep it low key. Dempster does the tuxedo one. That's cool, but that's more the demographic for that kind of event. This is what you would wear to a concert."

Dempster said he asks teammates to wear tuxedos because it's fun and they don't get to do that very often. He doesn't seem to mind the dressed-down parties, though—judging by the Colt 45 T-shirt he wore Friday.

"I always get huge support from my teammates," Dempster said. "Any chance I get to do that for one of my guys is nice for me."

The benefit concert—which raised money for the Boot Campaign, a charity that helps veterans reintegrate back into every day life—opened with a performance by the Midnight River Choir. LaRue followed, and had Wells join him onstage to play guitar for a song.

Was Wells hoping to get guests hooked on Texas Red Dirt music?

"That's the plan," Wells said. "This event is raising money for a great cause. And I hope it helps my friends get their music out there."

About this week

"The Exorcist" star Linda Blair will host screenings of the 1973 horror film Friday and Saturday at Hollywood Palms Cinema in Naperville and Sunday and Oct. 31 at the Hollywood Blvd Cinema in Woodridge. Also, "Whine Up" singer Kat DeLuna will perform at the fourth annual Haunted Hotel Ball on Saturday at the Hilton Chicago.

THE DIGIT

$54 MILLION

That's the scary-good amount "Paranormal Activity 3" brought in at the box offices in the U.S. and Canada this weekend, a record not only for a horror movie, according to the AP, but also a record for an October opening.

Matt and Scarlett's animal house

Note to Matt Damon, Scarlett Johansson (both left) and Cameron Crowe: PETA is not happy with you. The animal rights group is urging Crowe to put a disclaimer on his upcoming film "We Bought a Zoo," which is about exactly what it sounds like. The group said in a statement the flick depicts a "misleading and downright dangerous message" about what it takes to run a zoo.

Nightmare before Thanksgiving

Tim Burton is going to give quite a few kids a scare this Thanksgiving. The "Alice in Wonderland" director has designed a giant balloon for the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York, the New York Times reports. B. Boy, the character on which the balloon is based, was created from the leftover balloons at a London children's hospital, according to a wacky origin story Burton made up.

Honorably funny

Will Ferrell is seriously hilarious. The 'Anchorman' star was honored Sunday with the Mark Twain Prize for American Humor, thr.com reports. Fellow hilarious folks Jack Black, Molly Shannon, Conan O'Brien and Paul Rudd were on hand to pay tribute to the funnyman, who also made a stop at the White House press briefing room Friday, cnn.com reports. The mustache he'd promised to grow when he found out about the award? Mysteriously missing. REUTERS PHOTO

Birthday snuggles?

Ryan Reynolds spent his 35th birthday weekend with "Gossip Girl" Blake Lively, according to People magazine, which published a photo of the two together in Boston. Poor hotties, can't even make out in peace.

CRYIN' OUT LOUD

Umm ... too soon?

Jennifer Lopez's (above) lyrics about past loves hit a little close to home Saturday during a concert in Connecticut.

She started crying after a performance of "Until It Beats No More," which featured dancers re-enacting scenes of her and men from her past. That's right: A Lopez look-alike danced with guys who looked a lot like her exes Diddy, Cris Judd, Ben Affleck—and estranged husband Marc Anthony.

Said a teary Lopez: "I took a trip down memory lane."
